

Bob Townsend, of McGill University, gave a remarkable display to take the fourth spot, four-fifths of a second behind von Allmen. Townsend was last to start in the field of thirty and consequently had the poorest course. An added disadvantage was the fact that snow began to fall heavily shortly before his turn came.

The field included the best racers of Dartmouth, McGill, the Red Birds Ski Club, the St. Margaret's Ski Club and the St. Sauveur Ski Club.

Durrance, Prager and von Allmen, with international reputations, were favored to take the first three positions and lived up to expectations. Prager and von Allmen are both holders of the gold "AK" of the Kandahar Ski Club, most coveted of ski awards. This indicates that the runner finished in the first three in the Arlberg-Kandahar races on three occasions. Only five skiers in the world have done so.

Intercollegiate Ski Union

By Craig Ballantyne

DARTMOUTH'S supremacy in the college ski world, threatened for two days by McGill University's forces, was firmly re-established here when the three-day Intercollegiate Ski Union's senior championships came to a close with the cross-country race.

The Hanover, N. H., team placed its men first, second and fourth in the event while the best McGill could do was sixth, eighth and tenth. The points accumulated by Dartmouth in this event and in the combined cross-country and jumping gave the Indians the Dartmouth Cup, team title emblem, by a substantial margin.

Howard Chivers, great Dartmouth langlaufer, gave a remarkable display to win the race, a good 12 miles of heart-breaking travelling in one hour, 38 minutes and 51 seconds. Chivers was the fifth man to start and was in 15 minutes before any other racer.

Second to him was Percy Rideout of Dartmouth, who started thirty-second and was seventh to finish, less than two minutes behind the winner in elapsed time. Rideout was also second in the jumping event and his showing gave him first in the combined.

Out of a possible 500 points for the five scoring events, Dartmouth totalled 486.2 to McGill's 471.05. McGill by virtue of team victories in the downhill and slalom races held a lead of seven points that was more than wiped out later.

McGill had held high hopes of ending Dartmouth's perennial supremacy in the I.S.U. but the Redmen's best langlaufers, Bobby Johannsen and Chris Mamen ran themselves out in the first part of the race. Johannsen covered the first part of the course at high speed but toward the end he was unable to keep it up. He managed to finish but was in thirtieth position. Mamen finished tenth.

G. Gignac of Middlebury placed his college firmly in third place by a surprise win in the jumping. Johannsen was picked by all to win this event but was not up to his usual standard.

The meet was one of the best organized ever held in the Laurentians. The McGill Club, acting as host, was aided by the St. Margaret's Ski Club and by the Red Birds Ski Club.

The cross-country started at the Alpine Inn and ended at Domain d'Estereel where the closing banquet was held and prizes presented.

George Moore, who took third place in the combined as well as sixth in the race, and Fred Moore who did well in both downhill and slalom, formed one of the strongest parts of the McGill team.
